Vol. 22

Chinook, Alberta, Thursday, February 3rd 1944

TO PATRONS OF CHINOOK THEATRE

We wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your patronage to the shows since we started last June. We have been advised that we may expect to show the news reel again starting next Tuesday, February 8th which you well know is good news and recent. We must say, though, that we cannot guarantee every week as last year we missed a few times but through no fault of this management. Sometimes the reels are lost at sea as they are flown over every week by bomber plane, also at times a reel is badly damaged through improper usage. We hope you will again be pleased to see and hear this news reel and we will endeavor at all times to place a good grade of shows before you, but we cannot always do this as the best of shows are usually badly wanted by all exhibitors and we have to take our chances on getting them.

This coming show is an airplane thriller of the American Army Air Force and will provide many thrills which will be accompanied by suitable short features. The title is "FLYING BLIND" and features RICHARD ARLEN and JEAN PARKER with supporting cast. ALSO DON'T FORGET THE NEWS REEL.

C.P.R. Express Finds and Ships Reindeer for Hollywood.

George McMurray, traffic solicitor for the Canadian Pacific Express Company at Edmonton, Alta., was the "Santa Claus" who provided four reindeer for Paramount Pictures in Hollywood when that company had to have them for scenes in "Road to Utopia", forthcoming film on the Alaska gold rush, starring Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour.

He had a recollection of "a fellow somewhere in Saskatchewan driving a reindeer" when the word went out that the film capital had to have atmosphere for the picture. He checked with the publicity office of the Saskatchewan Government in Regina and found J. J. Dalke of Porcupine Plain, between Hudson Junction and Pelly, was the "fellow". He had nine reindeer, all trained.

Having found his man, Mr. McMurray made arrangements to ship immediately and in the top picture the Canadian Pacific Express man had his picture taken with Mr. Dalke (left) and the unusual cargo. Also provided for "Road to Utopia", but naturally segregated from the reindeer for shipping, were 27 sleigh dogs, with the lower picture showing some of the huskies being trained at Ryan's Farm at St. Albert near Edmonton.

Mr. McMurray's chain always has been "the Canadian Pacific Express can ship anything" and the reindeer and the huskies lined up on this assignment makes it no idle boast. The reindeer—five-year-old Cupid, a lady; and Dundee, Francis and Dancer, mules aged six, two and three—

The bride entered the Church on the arm of her father to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March by Miss Randale, and looked charming in a floor length gown of white crepe and embroidered veil with wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

The bride and groom were attended by Miss Betty Zawasky, sister of the bride and Mr. Hugh Wilson, brother of the groom. The bridesmaid wore a floor length dress of blue taffeta and carried a bouquet of carnations.

From the Church the families and a few friends went to the bride's parents where a delicious wedding dinner was served. The dining room tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers. The table was centered with a two tier wedding cake. The out of town guests were—Mr. and Mrs. Mike Smigelki of Benton, sister of the bride, and their son Billy. Mrs. Chas. Brown of Hartell, the groom's aunt and Mrs. Arychuk and daughter Kay of Wainwright. The happy occasion was made more interesting. It being the 27th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Zawasky.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

"Cherry Pie"

— By —

JEAN CAMERON

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Glancing in, Jean saw that even at this late hour the Automat was still crowded. She would have to share a table. She pulled the belt of her light coat tighter, plunged her hand deep into her pocket. A dime—a nickel for coffee tonight, a nickel for the subway tomorrow morning. At noon she would receive her first salary check.

The thought sent a warmth through her which even coffee could not duplicate. She slid the dime over the worn surface of the change desk, took her two nickels. She watched the cream, then the coffee, fill her cup, and turned to a neat-by table. She was not surprised to see that a well-dressed man sat opposite her. The changing crowd was one of the Automat's attractions, and the diners near her had ranged all the way from a fussy lady in furs, unfamiliar with the counters, to couples who had preferred tables and noisier shaggy at the change man. This gray-haired gentleman might well be one of her firm's prominent customers.

"Lots of out-of-town people to-night," she thought. She had made a game of guessing which ones were native New Yorkers. One had to have something like that to think about to relieve one's mind, if only for a short while, when looking so desperately for a job—hoping, praying that the next phone call would be from the agency. . . .

Again the warmth swept over her was not from the coffee she was sipping. She had a job, had had it for two weeks. The joy of having a place to hurry to when you awake in the morning, of entering and saying happily, "Good morning." The delight of abandoning the trips to the bureau, the futile dashes across town in answer to it. And of receiving a salary, she reminded herself practically. Tomorrow would be her first pay. The cup clattered in the saucer as she jubilantly set it down.

It hadn't been easy. She had been driven to think of returning to her aunt's, of spending the rest of her days in that dark little house, hearing a scolding tongue remind her of her obligations. But they had been so kind to her here. Mrs. McGonigal had cheered her up, encouraged her, waited patiently for her room rent. Now she was four weeks behind, and it made things difficult for the landlady, she knew. Tomorrow she could begin to pay her back, but she could never pay for the motherly advice, for the coffee and rolls every morning that were not included in the lodging house advertisement.

She had just been able to make her small savings last two weeks without asking for an advance. One of the office girls would leave soon to be married, and Jean would then be given a chance as a typist instead of filing clerk. In the meantime she filed merrily, realizing how many opportunities for advancement there were in an office employing fifty stenographers.

Her coffee was half gone. She noticed that the man opposite her was not eating at all. He had shoved aside, almost untasted, a sandwich and salad and was staring in a strained manner at the thick piece of cherry pie before him. With nervous fingers he lighted a cigarette. She sighed. It seemed incredible that anyone could leave food uncut. For over a week she had had only one meal a day beside Mrs. McGonigal's breakfasts. Then this noon one of the girls in the office had taken her to lunch, without a word to indicate she had noticed Jean's remaining in the coat-room during the noon hour. She would remember kindness like that.

The man pushed his plate away from him, sighed, stirred in his chair. Jean's heart bounced. She was not unattractively hungry—but he left it untouched the pie, and if he left it. . . .

He glanced at her, as he had done several times in the past few minutes. Her bright eager eyes were fastened on the plate. He rose, casually slipped on a tailored topcoat, then, taking his half-burned cigarette, deliberately plunged it deep into the pie. There was a faint hiss from the cherry juice. Jean's face reddened. Tears welled in her eyes. . . .

"And you've decided to have the operation, Mr. Carter? Good! I've told you repeatedly everything's in your favor."

The gray-haired man with the strained look winced. "I have to take your word for it till it's over," he said firmly. "I feel better now that I've come to a decision and ended this uncertainty. I have everything to live for, you've kept telling me. If I'd take care of myself in time. Perhaps, I almost came to another decision today, Doctor," he said firmly. "I feel better now that I've come to a decision and ended this uncertainty. I have everything to live for, you've kept telling me. If I'd take care of myself in time. Perhaps, I almost came to another decision today, Doctor. I was so worn out with thinking of this and business worries, I took the sleeping powder you gave me and spread it on the cherries in a piece of pie—all of it. I was going to make my exit sweetly, like the ancients. But I saw a girl, yet she must have been happy, for she was smiling. And I said to myself, 'I am not poor, I am not hungry, and I can be courageous, too. So here I am.' He sighed. 'I wish I could have left her the pie, instead of spoiling it.'"

The Fork-Lift Truck

Unloads Mountains Of Supplies From Freighters in Half the Time

Freighters at Allied Overland ports are unloaded in record time by a muscular little vehicle that moves mountains of supplies, the U.S. War Department announced. Unglamorously called the fork-lift truck, this weapon of war seldom sees battle, yet has received credit for much of the success of the North African invasion. As a factor in military operations fork-lift trucks were unknown until the outbreak of the war. Now the Quartermaster Corps is supplying them by tens of thousands to all branches of the Army.

Before the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1885, a letter posted in Victoria took three weeks to reach Toronto. 2552

Proves Its Worth

Helicopter Made Trip Which Was Impossible For Other Planes

A few days ago, a helicopter plane gave a dramatic demonstration of the practical utility of this type of craft in time of emergency. A United States destroyer exploded and sank off Sandy Hook. Among the survivors were many wounded men, badly in need of blood plasma. All other aircraft were grounded by sleet and heavy snow squalls, but a Coast Guard aviator took off in an experimental helicopter from Floyd Bennett Field and landed it on the Battery in New York. Fourteen minutes later it settled gently on the beach at Sandy Hook, with two cases of blood plasma for the survivors of the explosion.

The plasma was rushed to the wounded and immediately administered. Delivery of this life-saving fluid and equipment by boat would have taken at least an hour; by car, over an hour and a half. And minutes count when wounded men await the plasma which will give them their best chance of survival, so the helicopter may easily have saved lives by being already within the other craft were landbound. Yet its commander termed the flight a "routine operation."

Perhaps it was routine for this odd-looking rotary-winged machine which is the "pet" of Igor Sikorsky. However, it is routine in convincing manner how the helicopter can land in tiny spaces under conditions of visibility which make impossible all other methods of flying—Ottawa Citizen.

The Royal Bank of Canada Annual Meeting

Morris W. Wilson, President, says any degree of political freedom impossible under wholly planned economy. Challenges socialists to show how public would benefit by state monopoly of banking.

Sydney G. Dobson, Vice President and General Manager, reports bank business at unprecedented levels. Assets reach new peak of over $1,500,000,000.

The threat to the personal liberty of all Canadians, inherent in the plans of the socialists for the nationalization of Canadian industry, was emphasized by Morris W. Wilson, President of The Royal Bank of Canada, at the bank's Annual Meeting.

Mr. Wilson reviewed the tremendous role Canada had played in this mildest war of the time and the manner in which workmen and enterprisers alike had co-operated in it. "Despite this fact," he said, "we are being told that all the publicity methods revolutionary partisans can devise, that in order to win the peace we must change our entire economic system and launch out into new and untried paths, under new and inexperienced leaders. The theorists and visionaries who preach these doctrines of an economic revolution may be thoroughly honest and sincere, but both in the short and long run, on this point I cannot do better than quote the Editor of the London Economist, a well-known writer of liberal views.

"A wholly planned economy 'is incompatible with any degree of political freedom. The possibility of a man's earning his living by his own way, without let or hindrance, is the essential condition of any freedom of opinion, of discussion, any freedom to oppose. If more than a fraction of the electorate come to depend for their livelihood upon the temporary measures of the mechanism of the State—that is, upon the politicians—then democracy is at an end."

"I am more convinced than ever that the menace of socialistic teaching is one which closely affects every one in Canada in both his business and private life."

"These advocates of a new order have an astounding scheme, which will result in nothing less than complete regimentation of Canada. As you know, one of their principal objectives, and the first plank in their platform, is to nationalize the banks."

SOCIALIST MENACE

"Naturally, we are interested in preserving our business, in which so many shareholders have invested, and to which so many depositors have entrusted their savings. But even more as citizens than as businessmen, we deplore the rise of this creed, because we only too fully realize that the socialist plan would ruin this generation and set Canada back centuries.

"It is as a citizen as well as a banker that I am urging you to consider further considerations to which I hope you will give your earnest thought.

In Canada has been charted for us in several books which make clear that nothing short of complete nationalization of the means of production and finance will satisfy the party. That means domination of every phase of economic life, including agriculture, labour and capital. Therefore, because we all fall into one or other of these categories, we are all interested in every individual.

"What would the socialists achieve by nationalization of the banks? Their book on social planning says that before we have one board of directors for the national bank monopoly instead of the ten boards of directors that make the competitive chartered banks.

"Socialistic literature suggests that access to the books of the bank and a consequent rupture of the confidential relationship that now exists between the bank and depositor, would be of incalculable value in determining taxation policies. But would this appeal to the depositor?"

"Furthermore, as we are organized today, a prospective borrower may go from one bank to another if he fails to receive the first banker of his probity, ability and prospects; under the socialistic system, unless the prospective borrower could convince the state bank of the soundness of the project for which he sought to borrow money, and also that the transaction to be financed was in harmony with socialist party objectives, he would be turned down. He would have no other bank to look to for a loan. Do you think that such a system would assure the borrower as fair treatment as he now receives?"

"I believe the answer to these two questions, affecting depositors and borrowers, is a positive 'No.' Our history, history and experience lead us to expect that such a government monopoly of banking would be a source of ruin to party adherents. At the same time, we should witness a spread of that sterility of ideas and spirit which tends to accompany every human activity that finds itself in a position of unchallengeable power."

PRIVATE BANKING BEST

Mr. Wilson suggested that it was not simply the chance that banking the world over had continued in private hands, but that the people and the Government had considered it advisable from every point of view that banking should be free of political and partisan influences. He reminded his audience that Canadian banks were already effectively controlled by the Bank of Canada and that further intervention by the Government in the banking business would, in his belief, be superfluous and would not be welcomed by the majority who deal with the banks.

Mr. Wilson again urged business to speak up on its own behalf. "Business will have only itself to blame if, through inaction, it vacates or fails to occupy fields of activity into which it later finds that public opinion has forced the Government to enter."

Mr. Wilson saw no reason for approaching the post-war era with any defeatist attitude and declared that the same energy, initiative and selflessness which had developed in the war years, could be used for constructive purposes after the peace.

In all plans for the rehabilitation of devastated countries the United States and Canada would be looked to as the main sources of aid.

POST-WAR REHABILITATION

"I personally believe that large outright gifts of food, raw materials, finished goods and machinery to backward and devastated countries will in the long run, and even from the most selfish point of view, not only contribute most to human welfare, but both in the short and long run be in the best interests of those nations which can afford to make the gifts."

"If this is too much to expect of human beings in their present stage of development, the alternative must be loans on a very large scale on long and easy terms, or probably a combination of both loans and gifts."

GENERAL MANAGERS

Addressed by Sydney G. Dobson, Vice President and General Manager, in reviewing the bank's Balance Sheet said that the volume of business passing through the bank's books had been unprecedented during the past year. Total assets now exceeded $1,500,000,000, a very large increase in the history of the bank.

He reviewed at length the part played by the banks in assisting the country's war financing. "There appears to be a misconception in the minds of some people that the banks purchase a substantial portion of the Government war public issues and increase their earnings in this manner. This is not the case. During 1943 two Victory Loans were issued, totaling $2,689,000,000. The 4th Victory Loan floated in May last was purchased by 2,689,000 subscribers and the 5th Victory Loan in October, by over 3,000,000. In neither loan did the banks buy a share of their own account. While there is naturally some change in the holdings of the original subscribers, relatively only an unimportant amount found its way into the banks.

"In common with the other banks, we have done everything possible to make these Victory Loans a success. Managers have encouraged customers to subscribe or to increase their subscriptions. All depositors considered capable of subscribing for an amount of $50 or more have been urged to do so. In advertisements have been inserted in the press urging depositors to subscribe to the full extent of their ability."

EARNINGS MODEST

Despite the tremendous increase in the business of the bank, earnings were modest, said Mr. Dobson. "I think that any sane-minded person will agree that the $2,000,000 paid to shareholders last year was a very modest amount to be paid to the proprietors of the bank, when we consider the size of the organization and the tremendous amount of business it is necessary to handle in order to earn that amount. Any other type of business working with assets of one and a half billion dollars would have been able to earn for shareholders a considerably larger return. We consider this a very modest return, in relation to our two main earning assets, loans and investments, we find that the dividend paid to our shareholders was less than 7/10th of one cent on the dollar on the total of these two items, a very trifling dividend charge, to say the least. I have never heard the claim made that Canadian banks are not efficiently run, therefore our answer must be that the profit in banking is small."

Mr. Dobson reported that the progress made by the bank's South American branches had been particularly gratifying and that its foreign branches were in a position to be of practical aid in promoting post-war trade.

The General Manager remarked on the efficient manner in which the bank's business had been handled, and paid tribute to the enthusiasm and ability of the many young women who have joined the bank since the war began.

Production Objectives— Or Expectations?

For two years, Dominion and Provincial Government officials have announced definite production objectives in plenty of time for farmers to plan their own programmes. The 1944 objectives, made public over a month ago, have had time to "soak in." Will they be met?

In looking over the published figures, I, for one, find it difficult to distinguish between hopes and expectations. The Dominion-Provincial Conference favoured no increase in wheat acreage; but in view of the relation between the price of wheat and other farm produce, and the discontinuance of wheat acreage reduction payments, a considerable increase is probable.

The figures published for oil seed crops are puzzling when considered in the light of Mr. Gardiner's statement, as quoted in the "Farm News Press Clip Sheet, No. 424," which reads in part, "Of special products, such as oil producing plants (crops) . . . it is hoped that some improvement in quantity will be accomplished." But, the 1944 "objective" for oil seed crops is given, on the same page, as 2,005,700 acres—only 66% of the 1943 acreage! For what it is worth, we offer the opinion that the objective will win and the Minister's hope will lose, unless the price for flaxseed is fixed at a very attractive level.

The farmer will be governed very largely by what will pay and by what the United Nations need. He has, to some extent, sacrificed the former for the latter; but can only go so far. We mustn't expect to get flax without paying what it costs.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

ORDER CERTIFIED
SEED POTATOES NOW

Certified seed potatoes are being withheld from export to meet the requirements of Canadian growers, but, the Plant Protection Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture points out, demands for these potatoes from other countries are very strong. Supplies not needed for planting in Canada should be released for export in March before the season in the U. S. A. is too far advanced for planting. This means that orders for certified seed potatoes should be placed without delay while supplies are still available.

The planting of certified seed potatoes for table stock will give a heavier yield from each acre planted to such seed. Seed potato growers are reminded that fields entered for certification in 1944 must be planted with either "Foundation" or "Foundation A" seed.

The local District Inspector Seed Potato, Certification, Plant Protection Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, has a list of growers having "certified," "Foundation" or "Foundation A" seed potatoes for sale.

Canadian Certified Seed Potatoes Should be ordered AT ONCE

PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW, while supplies are still available. Seed potatoes are being withheld from export to meet the requirements of Canadian growers; but the demands from outside Canada are very strong and supplies not needed for planting in Canada should be released for export in March before the season in the U.S.A. is too far advanced for planting.

ORDER "CERTIFIED" for Table Stock Production. Larger crops are needed in 1944. Obtain a heavier yield from each acre by planting Canadian Certified Seed Potatoes.

ORDER "FOUNDATION" and "FOUNDATION A" for Certified Seed Production. All fields entered for certification in 1944 must be planted with either "Foundation" or "Foundation A" seed potatoes.
